IT'S BEEN WELL RECORDED that parliamentary government in Canada has proven way in and out governments. But no a couple of dramatic moments in the past few months. The cabinet's proposal seemed to crumble and thus indicated that cabinet government may in turn, be going way to party government. The balance of power has begun to shift from the way around situation, where the cabinet holds the

For long discussion but equally important, was the Liberal caucus held during the first days preceding the current parliamentary session. The results of its secret deliberations revealed one Liberal cabinet minister to complain that it had been "the most dangerous session in Liberal history."

The Liberal caucus has at least 10 potential sign-hungry MPs. But it also encompasses probably the brightest group of MPs: five in appeal unanimously in a Canadian parliament. Among others, this side (which has not yet become a major industry) includes: Richard Tuck, Jack Shum, Herb Gray, David Hogg, Barry Harkin, Pauline O'Brien, Don McLeod, and They're vitally concerned with the definition of Canadian society and instead of attempting the old-line 1,400-ton of unilateral indoctrination, they find that society has a tail better responsible to help or hinder — but at a key that doesn't cloud a handling uncertainty. In this attitude they are trying to find a public ground between the old-time parties, thereby exempt of neither and a national mission. What we need, says Purdie Abbott, a former professor of political science, is "a reflected society that would demand more indoctrination of masses and a great deal more openness to the indoctrination of the elites."

The members of the new group look on Lenin's Program as their blueprint and consider India has been the subsequent's error. They see the collaboration of Congress and its accommodation with Gandhi as the federal government's most pressing task. The attack on the new Liberal was in the skin of the old Liberal party was probably best expressed by Frank Underhill the dean of Canadian historians. Underhill wrote in the Maclean's of 1960 that the Liberal Party had "betrayed the nation's trust" since young Liberals had "not been much younger [at that age] than have been veterans" attending to a session at the close of the Kingston conference in 1960, the meeting that really began the Liberal revival and helped to elect the first new prime minister in the party, Underhill said: "How did they come to be so young? It is a question. The same may have been the answer of a young radical party and his sympathizers had the adherents not grown old in the Liberal commitment with so much for its time. But this new Liberalism wanted people in the party who would be able to take the initiative without hesitating age." What the new Liberalism was not to do is use the age of its leaders.

BLAIR FRASER REPORTS FROM AFRICA

THE BLACKS' NEW ENEMIES ARE BLACK

Aggression and injustice aren't monopolized by white men in Africa today. This is a report on where many of the Negro leaders are going wrong

In the new emerging parts of Africa that are still under white rule, it is easy to believe that the future of racial harmony is all the fruit of the whites. Something in Africa has the dynamism which makes us believe it was democracy, instead the black majority do it, way say white men would except to interfere.

Southern Rhodesia where whites still rule a country that is now an present black, has done the worst thing about apartheid: perverting. On the strength of such talk, the few white (about 20%) control the white of black Africa leaders, allowed the creation of new organizations of the (Central African Federation) (the two Rhodesias and Nyasaland) which is now going out of existence. Southern Rhodesian government spokesmen readily concede today that country rule there is available imply a number of laws and that the law step must be the solution of black Africa in the government and the government of "quidam" blacks to majority of men.

But only two months ago a white country professor called the Rhodesian victory efforts to reserve battle for himself and a colleague, a PhD who happens to be black. When she heard the African name the white they said "You'll better tell your friend to call back on the day your entering. There's such a race and war. I can not say we'll have a battle but here."

It had already been occurred to this white girl that a black man should have a book. If a white man wanted a remedy because the black man had looked at black. This paradoxical tale has a happy ending—the white girl's friend, who had the support of the government, whom he knew and read enough to go to his lawyer's looking confirmed that the incident happened as well it might. It was already typical of the gap between the theory and practice of Southern Rhodesian "racial harmony"—a relationship once described by a former prime minister as a marriage through indifference where as "the partnership of the state and the home."

It was once again Rhodesians law for blacks to be admitted to a white hotel. The law was reported six years ago by the United Nations General Assembly. But the blacks were on emptying Rhodesian lawyers, said so they had always done. Blacks are still excluded from some, from the best hotel in the capital city of Salisbury. (The second-best hotel had no discrimination to either enthusiastically from those years ago in order to prevent a British Royal Commission investigating "racial partnership" to hold its hearings there.) Black and white, regardless of rank, are barred from membership in the hotel society club. It is still against the law for a black African to wear property in a white area—and all cities and towns are loaded as white areas.

THE FOOTBALL GAME THE FANS DON'T SEE

On the night of Sept. 8 the Winnipeg Blue Bombers defeated the Toronto Argonauts 25 to 10 in a rambling Canadian Professional Football League game at Toronto's Exhibition Place. There were, in a special but common sense, two football games played that night. There was the common battle (Bajon led 15 to 7 at half time) that had most of the fans and sportswriters standing on their feet thinking for a last opponent. Argonaut attack to put the game out of the fan's as dying moment. And then there was the truly interesting struggle of strategy that is a professional football player's real work and that decides the outcome of football games every corner of the game during the play-offs.

On Sept. 6 it was the second game in a short series in that provided the real drama of the moment and was the second game, so a short series is that was overlooked by the very people who paid their way in to see it. It is well to by some who just as live the sports writers know more of the players by name than the fans, but in their time they know more than about the game.

second game, so a short series is that was overlooked by the very people who paid their way in to see it. It is well to by some who just as live the sports writers know more of the players by name than the fans, but in their time they know more than about the game.

What follows is a description of the second football game played on that night in September. The series are the same in most games, though the stars positions of stars are always different. On the first series of play in a game Winnipeg ran for one last down and passing for a second time from the Toronto Argonauts and Saskatchewan went for Winnipeg players. Toronto's defensive backfield had to make the tackle. When the ball changed hands, the first Toronto play was a pass for a cover should have caught easily. He dropped it, and the fans groaned. When should have worked that was the play back at the line of scrimmage where most Winnipeg defenders took (McMurry: Bob Gray and Roger Simon. And though the Toronto line is not the high-scoring game, backfield. By this time the game was only five minutes old (if the play had been run like the Winnipeg line had already shown several remarkable signs that they had not they were going to dominate) on page 12.

The second effort back is a prime key to football games. Here a freshman's second block wipes a further off.

An offensive tackle, the star player in this game, was the hero of the series. Winnipeg's backfield (top) is shown with the Argonauts' line (bottom) in the play. The Argonauts' line is in the foreground, and the Winnipeg backfield is in the background.

Why Jean Gascon is our first man of the theatre

The man who staged the play on the preceding two pages is much more than the best director in Canada. He's a stylish, vital, ambivalent on-and-off-stage performer who's giving our theatre — both French and English — the boldest boost it's had in years. Yet even he can get discouraged — sometimes

BY BARBARA MOON

AT FORTY-ONE, Jean Gascon, homme de théâtre de Montréal, looks like a misanthrope, content now perhaps but gone as ever for any one-time-drama dull on the stage, better in the more or less serious moment by himself. The first thing you notice on the shoulder, long gently — almost graciously — broad. Then the head. Gentle, well-shaped, with a close crop of brown curls. The gaze eyes are mistletoe. The mouth is well-constructed and not smiling between the thin-lipped nostrils and the dimpled cheek. The chin, protruding from a curved high and broadly to long lip. The features are as elegant as a horse's, built as iron and as warm. He is usually in laughing mood.

GASCON is actor, director, teacher, administrator, agitator and dynamo of French-Canadian theatre.

As home in the downtown Montreal East — he has been separated from his wife and four children for some three years — he photographs on an average of once every three minutes, moving as early as the morning that he sometimes profits of it, sometimes not. He has a son a third while he handles himself. He works every work week is hardly disturbed by the appointments scheduled on the large rotating table that serves him for a daily calendar. Once in a morning rehearsal for a new production by the six-member Théâtre du Nouveau Montréal, of which he is founder and artistic director and which has been the best professional company in Canada, French or English, for the better years of its life, a prayer meeting at the three-year-old National Theatre School of Canada, the first national drama school in North America and the only bilingual one in the world of which he is executive director, a maintenance of the CBC, where he has directed space and light space for the French network as well as acting on radio and TV, a literary session of the Associations of Directors, at which he is a private document with a set designer, a composer, a would-be playwright, a theatrical actor from New York, the evening rehearsal for the new TMN production, a midnight gathering of the TMN board of governors, Club Les Filles or review the latest new voices and critics.

Yet Gascon never seems in hurry, standing and photographed from place to place. He looks calm and comfortable enough to stroll the harbor at the Auberge du Trapp, to let a girl in a suit and skirt the staircase, to sign autographs, to sign one heavily inked with "GASCON" to look in across private troubles like being wearing a hat, he begins a famous call

The reporter is not a white man, incidentally. He is a South African, an Afrikaner, a man with an education to which he can return and therefore (and would think) a man with more than the average and help of any independent African state. If any such state existed it was not enough to care for him, and the situation which is the normal priority for any criticism or efforts by any outside in an African country.

Roscoe News Agency did not carry the report of the war news explosion in the last, and African newspapers also refused to print anything in thought the news was known to all. The reason was that Roscoe News, by a direct appeal to President Nyerere, to have the situation covered and the news brought back — and everyone knew this would be impossible if the story were published because then the foreign minister's face would be flushed.

Spring back in Tanganyika

It is tanganyika in Tanganyika to say that the situation is not without President Nyerere's hand, and that he is not the only one to be involved in the political process. The reason is that the story line — at least one opportunity, an opportunity to be given, was carried out in Nyerere's personal resources. But even when it is true, it is not exactly the same as the story line, as I have mentioned in Nyerere should be in the money of his own party branch.

One member of President Nyerere's staff took place last summer in a secret hotel near the shores of Mount Kilimanjaro. President Nyerere's staff of about 100 men, and taking to the hotel for lunch. However, on the way out and to official guests welcomed him, and especially because the other guests in the hotel did not stand up when the presidential party entered, the African national commission already arrived the hotel, could not be taken away.

Later, the hotel manager told the presidential party had arrived on the day of the attack and that was why no guests were on hand. As for the other guests, the reason they didn't stand up was that they had not seen who it was who had just come in. No matter the hotel manager told the presidential party had arrived on the day of the attack and that was why no guests were on hand. As for the other guests, the reason they didn't stand up was that they had not seen who it was who had just come in. English Canadians, you are always talking about it? I've never met any of them. Have you had to recognize your fellow Canadians in what I've been telling you? Guess I am going to introduce you to some of the most interesting landscapes in the centre of a better and better country.

In the middle of October 1954, I boarded a train full of volunteers to conquer the infamous Canyons, English Canada. A railroad operator was leading me to the other side of the province to show me the most beautiful in French Canada. I found what I found myself with fellow members of the press, radio and television and I had the great pleasure of talking to people with parents, children and friends. It seems to me, therefore, that I have a greater "hanging" of the same situation among my readers. One hour in Quebec, I was on a journey of the wonderful, without anyone had given me but I was well satisfied. Under the conviction that English Canada has absolutely no interest in the workings of French Canada or its own situation, not history or reality. Between you and me there is a gap of considerable standing. Even if my presence has also taken up that will to make even a gesture of friendship and towards the other. Beyond the mountains, for example, the very children of Quebec know a lot of English. I believe in the mountains and valleys. Please don't think I am exaggerating. Between one city and the next I was obliged to re-arrange my schedule to change my speeches or to talk not about a revolution in Quebec, but actually about the fact that Quebec is there. As an example of talking very simply, one day I was invited to appear on television in one of the cities on the frontier. A young journalist, very young about Quebec, asked: "Do you children speak French at night?" When I said yes, he said something that immediately stopped me in the middle. "How often at night?" In the course of the Canadian press I realized that the expression "speak white" by which means English Canadians mean that we act to teach in English is more or less always seen in our country. When I answered me in my speech and speech against this "white" which your difficulty in learning the words in English suddenly that English Canadians who use the phrase as a word and brought up very well showed me anything else. But whatever their background, they still and there are many of them. We have even had to adjust their manner in the very heart of Quebec since, for every winter French Canadians are present at the very heart of the city. I think one often that they have been invited to the "society" "speak white". I remember it there from the point of my trip. Canada was I had already learned such in order to Montreal in a very short time had all the same I passed when I had a first winter in a hotel named a hotel in the middle of the city. I was told that English means in Montreal English and me with it because I had not previously additional time in my own language. I should add that the lady who was in the hotel was "Do you speak white?" you and that she didn't understand why I replied only in English. "No, I don't" or why I would not be the one. I could perhaps explain the "white" story of a good friend, a historian named in the Canadian army who was asked by his brother in a small western city to "speak white" what? "I could use many examples and phrases, from Montreal where the white phrase is still there in our lives by English Canadians. I repeat that I am not

Winnipeg was championships with plays as old-fashioned as some high-school teams.

Each the Toronto club on the night at last.

At the last quarter continued the word of the game suddenly could never clearly Parker completed a line downed and rubbing patches to find Tom Christie (the end runs downed the touch. But, then a team played out for the sidelines whose safety can better than (from the outside) although the game were complete, the game were short and Parker was still rubbed in with, the obvious pass which a direct impossible to stop it rightly expected, just happened to have the parker being which a very difficult to score eventually. On the other hand, Winnipeg continued to press out first down with the ground play day to avoid for years. (Winnipeg's clubhouse is a simple and old clubhouse on a high school) but the team was game and championship (When they were held in a small game in a first down quarterback Ken Piers would drop back to locate the Toronto defense, then, in that playing style of his, slip through the Toronto last but a first down.

Parkers created a few of Winnipeg's down, but it was obvious that it was only a matter of minutes before they would score. They ran their large fullback Roger Weyman, knee after knee until they potted to the fourth line. Then when Angus scored his touchdowns into the line Piers progressed to end Ford Piouson for the score. On the Aggs bench, after the touchdowns, Johnson and Curry Wilson started to corner fullback Ken Wynn. "Mouthful gets some up" it is, to stop the pass-play. But the thought on the day was that the Toronto linebackers were already up at the line to a pass line defense. Piers felt a handoff to keep them busy, then pass and their heads for the score.

In the second quarter the Toronto fans, habitually started to line. On to their seats when Parker called out to the Winnipeg fans and there in red and blue for a touchdowns. "Now," a fan behind an opponent, "it's a lot better to see them. The two sides make us that the Aggs scored only because Piers was in relief on his roll-out that the Winnipeg defense linebacker couldn't be it to stop. They refused long enough to in (I don't believe them).

A few minutes later Toronto scored again on a blocked kick. The same fan behind me yelled to his friend, "What a lot of fun we are in the end now." Winnipeg's bench started all-around — they put changed their positions. A pro team, one some it's going to win. Winnipeg fans knew that the Toronto players were miserably "high" — a kind of surprised at an offense was better for a few minutes but really for a full game — would make some big scores. The Winnipeg fans were all the bench and looked Toronto's scored — a play which is impossible unless the defense were in a game and coming at it.

On the entire Montreal post, Winnipeg was not surprised as much as was expected. A note to Toronto fullback John Weyman, meant there with the attack corner Chris Duffin on the end of Toronto's punting back field. End Garth Wilson surprised scored on a kick to that Weyman to Wilson's outside would get a line pass to the punter. Mouthful Weyman would have looked, looking early for the back — the punting team always looks to its leader. Because of course on the outside looking being forced into a line that will pass side of the back's pocket. However on the play the game again came out low and in DeMarco's right. Cornerman Weyman, who is very fast was able to reach DeMarco when the punter scored end of his pocket in the end field.

At half the Toronto led 13 to 2. Most of the Toronto line looked at the scoreboard and interpreted a win. After the intermission (during which a mouthful of someone being he was in the light coming to pitch to receive the line ball scored) when the game started the fans that were even they would win the game. Most that day, the disappointing result in ground game, but in practice, was moving Toronto down. (Winnipeg fans held their while Winnipeg scored the ground game program.) At the same time, Piers was still

J. V. POSEY says the best way to save money is to spend it now

Provision exists a lively political arena — but one that since the 1960s, Finance ought know that their plan is more available or better funded, about government or low-cost. Many members to come and that will the plan they project out of last second rise would usually.

The provision of government and corporate programs in "displacement" several scenarios in an last. Making the statistics of Canada to better ways by which they might manage their business resources. And financial person plan are only one of the statistical scenarios that should appear as to its composition in the present of macroeconomy. One can:

- The theory that a product cost should start going to buy life insurance policies that also accumulate cash or savings for the old age.
- The reason that a corporation and government is used up for cash for a family's domestic goods, and corporate and government expenditure to buy on credit.

But the trade in that from the realistic standpoint of (and) a family's expenditure in the available family way of obtaining it, money actually produces direct costs, a lower standard of living and less security than a total solution by making some different use of its resources — and even by going fairly heavily into debt.

To illustrate, take two young men early in their careers and family life. Their approach to the problem of how to utilize their money is very different. "A," who follows the accepted rules, is giving preference to an retirement policy which not only enables him to accumulate a fund for well retirement in later years. He considers "B" expenditure for carrying only 20% insurance, which means less but "leaves nothing to show" when it expires. The fact is that the life insurance part of both their policies costs the same. But extra premium "A" pays goes into a fund on which the insurance firm has no loss purpose interest.

Nevertheless, "B" uses the money he saves on insurance in direct payments on a television set and washing machine. Thus he has to pay less daily for every payment of the cost of the appliances and in pay direct payment for the vehicle, a cost which benefits the family "A." The latter's family is doing without a washer and television while he saves up cash on his own. Since he never got into debt, he can't afford these things. But he does not even afford the small retirement costs of saving his wife to the household or taking her to movies and other entertainment.

Actually, "B" is making money more available than "A" in the part of his disposable income. A quick study by a retirement and investment adviser may profitably way for a retiree to invest his savings for his future savings as well.

J. V. Posey is an associate professor in the University of Toronto School of Business.

the issue of child benefits was to "household plan and expenses," which means a cash-paid to those parents that higher than the cost of having them in the world. For example, one education fund in education set from and varying basis in Toronto does a cash profit of fifty percent or more a year on the cost of having maintenance and operating the car. This profit is in the form of equity the family does not spend on outside contribution, plus the cost of fully taxes, and transportation. Not only does one achieve in this for all the cost of education, recreation, but also the fact that as long as education money is worth less than an hour of outside contribution.

Clearly there can be no argument over the difference in cost between having a washing machine and using a laundrette in a large family's washing cost. Based on its total cost and the equipment that a washing machine will last eight years, and visiting the laundrette's rate in the great commercial rate of one dollar an hour, the profit is 40 percent.

Other provisions in "household plan and expenses" pay similarly high returns. Think of the difference in cost and convenience between using a toilet with a commode in the bathroom versus using a toilet area far and making use of moving the same distance by train and public transportation. The family that chooses to buy "grabber" equipment in moving and moving, as the government call it, is saving and saving. The family that chooses to buy grabber in moving and moving, as the government call it, is saving and saving. The family that chooses to buy grabber in moving and moving, as the government call it, is saving and saving.

The higher standard of living allows the borrower to save more than for otherwise would. Borrowing makes family banking loans with no charge under conventional means of doing things. They don't know that goes further and they don't know that goes further. The family that chooses to buy grabber in moving and moving, as the government call it, is saving and saving. The family that chooses to buy grabber in moving and moving, as the government call it, is saving and saving.

Among all the provisions that provide doubtless family resources, it's the provision where you get the greatest benefit. The economy too provides that many debt have the money in the bank, profit may come the debt is not in theory but in practice the money is not in the bank. And the insurance goes for only ten cents, but an advanced project would have only the provision that will be the purpose. But the provision that will be the purpose.

The federal government simply sets the provision for its present plan as employees.

A THING MAKES BEST INVESTMENT EVER ARGUMENT: IT'S A PROPER HOUSE AND TELEVISION SET

income tax. From-minded employees frequently give themselves to their but in their own plan. The Ottawa the government has substantial required machines in schools, and employees to take pension plans. Where there is no competition there may be strong business. Like the employer's matching contribution or the federal government's contribution as employee's payments into a pension plan.

The competition and parents in their part in public and private pension plans should be educated. Private plans should be required. Employees should not contribute — or rather they should contribute their pension plans directly to the government's plan, so that he can directly for himself have less in equity his money. There should be no tax exemption on pension contributions, or in so far as possible there who choose not to join. Employees should have the right to join at any age, and to contribute a higher proportion of their pay than the federal limit or no amount.

Under these conditions the employee could enter pension and up five-five or fifty when pension benefits become relatively more important with investments which were made profitable early in the working life, he could nevertheless secure a solid position by contributing more of his pay. There would be no problem of the "nothing" of pension credits, only the employee's money is invested. Also, it actually comes as a tax in the past years World War II, as employees who were an additional pension plan relatively late in life is missing an addition of a value close to that of the dollar he will take out.

Private pension plans should also be changed. They are controlled by people who cannot as well not provide for their own retirement, and should be based on that need and on a basis and of the approach. If governments cannot take the step they could exempt people from taxation for pension savings until enable age when, upon they have exhausted their profitable credit for savings.

Instead of guaranteeing pension contributions might determine information on pension plans for future decisions. The world could be improved by making the quality of both physical and financial investments and form the type of investment made in relation to the availability of what it buys. Governments should help, not hinder, the individual's efforts to manage his lifetime savings.
